Title (EN): Promoting integration of the gender dimension in biomedical and health related research. Gendered and translational approaches in basic, clinical and public health research.
Final Report GenderBasic

Abstract description (EN):

The GenderBasic project aimed at providing a set of practical tools, examples and best practice recommendations to help scientists incorporate sex and gender differences into their research more effectively. The GenderBasic project analysed the factors which facilitated or inhibited the incorporation of the gender dimension into basic, preclinical and clinical research in EU-funded life sciences projects and at leading European research institutes. The project also commissioned international experts on sex, gender, and health to write review articles on the relevant methodological, practical, ethical and financial issues as well as the impacts of sex and gender on a number of diseases and conditions. The articles appeared in a special edition of the journal Gender Medicine (vol4, Suppl.B, dec. 2007). The project was selected as an excellent example of the positive impacts EU research can achieve.
